Diplomacy In The Springtime

Spring is traditionally the season of, among other things, tulips and illacs and love. But for Western diplomats seeking to arrange German talks with the Soviet Union, such simple delights have nothing to do with the case.

Spring is also the season in which (on May 27) Russia's brink-of-war ultimatum on West Berlin expires. It would be folly to assume that Russia is bluffing, though she may be. If she is not bluffing, the threat of world war is greater than at any time since the final months that preceded World War II.

That is reason enough for holding spring talks. But it is to be feared that the people who see hope in the prospect of such talks are in for another disillusionment. All the efforts of Western leaders to find even the possibility of a common ground with Russia have encountered an attitude of inflexible arrogance.

The Russians are making demands, as on Berlin, without offering anything in exchange, But they show no signs of willingness to grant, or even to discuss, any demands the West may make. What they seem to want, in short, is not a negotiated bargain but a negotiated surren-

There are certainly no visible signs that Russia is willing to revise her position on Germany. This is the realistic prospect, and it is bleak

The West is eager for talks, simply because you never know for sure until you try. It wants to regain the diplomatic initiative, virtually monopolized by Moscow. And there may be a slim reason to hope that if talks accomplish nothing else, they may give Russia a chance to pull back from the brink of war to which she has so two months. recklessly charged.

Not Worth A Continental

Money is something everybody wants but few bother to worry about how money works. As long as cross or stretch his legs, or rise they have some, can go to the store and get something for it, they figure everything about money is satisfactory. The worker is told by his labor leader that if the money does not bring home the bacon, the thing to do is to strike for more pay. But he is beginning to discover now that every time he strikes for more pay, it costs more to get what money buys.

C. Canby Balderston, Vice Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, once put all this in a very effective way.

In England it is understood by the majority of citizens that British firms must remain competitive if they are to export, and that unless they do export. Britishers will not eat or, at least, not eat well. In Germany the run-away inflation of the 1920's, with its destruction of savings and of individual liberties, was impressed upon the German consciousness so deeply that the guarding of the monetary unit is now a cardinal principle of the German government. Were the mark to be endangered, the German people would be heard from, and effectively. In our own country, however, it is a long time since citizens suffered from wild inflation, and their subconscious thinking does not react to the phrase 'not worth a Continental' in terms of human suffering. In the United States it is the unemployment of the 1930's that has impressed the national thinking even to this day. This means that our own country must learn from the experience of others that inflation and unemployment are both threats and that flirtation with the first does not avoid the second .

In January this country had 4,724,000 unemployed which is a startling number. The likelihood is that when the causes of the current run of unemployment are studied, it will be found that one very serious cause is that the United States has outpriced itself in world markets and is beginning to outprice itself in the domestic market. It is true that some bankers and merchants believe that "a little inflation is a

But truth to tell there is never a little inflation as there is no little cancer. Those are just mitigating terms to make whatever trouble one has a little more palatable. But all experience with inflation shows that if it is permitted to take hold, it is very difficult to more common in the young, of degenerative types. This will control. From a long range standpoint, it hurts every-

Balderston put it aptly when he said: Creeping inflation has another vital defect. It will not remain gradual any more than a lion cub ies. These vessels supply the old greater activity. will continue small and harmless. Once the people ticker with blood and any disturbof a country accept the prospect of continued inflation and begin to make their business decisions in heart, which is primarily of mus- defects. The same can be said of the light of that prospect, the infant cub starts to grow. It becomes an animal, not only big, but uncontrollable - a vicious lion uncaged .

In the end the wage-price spiral destroys the value of money and reduces the productivity of the nation. At the present moment, the State of New York is broke; the city of New York is broke; the State of Michigan is broke. This is only the beginning. As the dollar loses in value, no matter how much is collected in taxes, it will be insufficient to pay for the goods and services which state and municipal governments have to pay.

When policemen are underpaid, the entire community is endangered; when school teachers are Hershfield. underpaid, the children suffer. The depression of the 1930's produced an inadequately educated generation. Our people need to give thought to what is actually happening. We have not been defeated by Soviet three times a week, I'd go hun-Russia in war; our cities have not been bombed out of existence but the streets are filthy because it is becoming too expensive to keep them clean. Our children have not been brain-washed by a conqueror but teachers do not enjoy holding two jobs to earn a living and when they have to do that, they approach the little brats without the patience and loving-kindness that are essential in making decent men and by learning and training. Money, which can be the cause of all evil, is also two minutes ago.

John Foster Dulles' Physical Heroism Has Not Been Fully Appreciated

WASHINGTON-The full story of John Foster Dulles' heroism has not yet been told. Probably it can't be told in full for some

This writer, when in Mexico for the inauguration of President Lopez Mateos, reported that the Secretary of State was suffering great pain, had two doctors standing by one night, but went through the ordeal of shaking hands with several thousand Americans at an embassy reception, plus the formalities of the Mexican inauguration, without letting anyone know how ill he was.

He even refused to call off his trip to San Francisco to speak before the Chamber of Commerce, remarking to a friend that, if he was suffering from cancer, one or two days would make no difference in reaching a hospital.

Back in Washington, Dulles rested a few days, then flew to Paris for the meeting of NATO. The European statesmen who sat opposite him had no idea they were talking to a sick but courageous man. He had to pass up four diplomatic functions and curtail his work, but faithfully attended the chief NATO conferences.

Once again, he came back to Washington to find his doctors amazed at his stamina and sternly warning that he would have to slow down. He did slow down for a while, went to the West Indies, then came back to throw himself into the pressing prob-

Mrs. Dulles Agrees

President Eisenhower argued with him, threatened to order him out of the State Department, Finally he decided Dulles would never be happy if he were not at work. Mrs Dulles agreed. Most women want their husbands to retire after a certain age, but Mrs. Dulles, knowing her husband, knows that he lives only to pilot our pressing foreign affairs toward the goal of peace. If he retired, he would be restless, unhappy, and might not last.

Shortly before he went Europe this last time, Dulles's pains started coming back. He refused to be hospitalized. London he did not tell Prime Minister Macmillan that he was ill and would have to undergo another operation. Nor did he project,

The only European in whom he confided was Chancellor Adenauer, 83-year-old bader of West Germany who has become Dulles's close friend. The two have sometimes differed, sometimes have been irritated at each other, but there is great basic trust between the two, and Dulles confided that when he returned to Washington he would have to undergo another operation. The Chancellor almost broke down and wept. Dulles told the old German not to worry, that the United States would not let Ger-

When Dulles flew back to Washington he was racked with pain and fatigue. Under Secretary of State Chris Herter was in South Carolina taking warm baths for his arthritis, which at times makes it difficult for him to walk. Dulles urged Herter to finish the treatments. He himself went to the hospital and has centinued to direct major State Department policy from his bed.

The Secretary of State was suffering from lesions, an aftermath of his previous operation, a hernia, and from diverticulitis. In

Secretary Dulles is determined to settle the Berlin crisis, afterwhich he will probably be content to retire to the status of White House adviser, leaving the active direction of the State De-

Few Men Of Our Time Can Equal Dulles' Courage By Joseph Alsop American government is going to

At a minimum, the illness of John Foster Dulles is likely to last much longer than has yet been admitted. The official announcement predicted that the Secretary of State would be absent from his office for a month. But Dulles himself has warned the White House that he will probably have to be away for

The two-month estimate was certainly not soft or self-indulgent, since very few men of our time can equal John Foster Dulle's courage in the face of illness. In truth, he was very ill already, and the doctors were already clamoring to operate, when he grimly crossed the Atlantic for his last tour of the Western will. # Diplomacy In The Springtime

Spring is traditionally the season of, among other things, tulips and iilacs and love. But for Western diplomats seeking to arrange German talks with the Soviet Union, such simple delights have nothing to do with the case.

Spring is also the season in which (on May 27) Russia's brink-of-war ultimatum on West Berlin expires. It would be folly to assume that Russia is bluffing, though she may be. If she is not bluffing, the threat of world war is greater than at any time since the final months that preceded World War II.

That is reason enough for holding spring talks. But it is to be feared that the people who see hope in the prospect of such talks are in for another disillusionment. All the efforts of Western leaders to find even the possibility of a common ground with Russia have encountered an attitude of inflexible arrogance.

The Russians are making demands, as on Berlin, without offering anything in exchange, But they show no signs of willingness to grant, or even to discuss, any demands the West may make. What they seem to want, in short, is not a negotiated bargain but a negotiated surren-

There are certainly no visible signs that Russia is willing to revise her position on Germany. This is the realistic prospect, and it is

The West is eager for talks, simply because you never know for sure until you try. It wants to regain the diplomatic initiative, virtually monopolized by Moscow. And there may be a slim reason to hope that if talks accomplish nothing else, they may give Russia a chance to pull back from the brink of war to which she has so two months recklessly charged.

These Days

Not Worth A Continental

Money is something everybody wants but few bother to worry about how money works. As long as they have some, can go to the store and get something for it, they figure everything about money is satisfactory. The worker is told by his labor leader that if the money does not bring home the bacon, the thing to do is to strike for more pay. But he is beginning to discover now that every time he strikes for more pay, it costs more to get what money buys.

C. Canby Balderston, Vice Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, once put all this in a very effective way.

In England it is understood by the majority of citizens that British firms must remain competitive if they are to export, and that unless they do export, Britishers will not eat or, at least, not eat well. In Germany the run-away inflation of the 1920's, with its destruction of savings and of individual liberties, was impressed upon the German consciousness so deeply that the guarding of the monetary unit is now a cardinal principle of the German government. Were the mark to be endangered, the German people would be heard from, and effectively. In our own country, however, it is a long time since citizens suffered from wild inflation, and their subconscious thinking does not react to the phrase 'not worth a Continental' in terms of human suffering. In the United States it is the unemployment of the 1930's that has impressed the national thinking even to this day. This means that our own country must learn from the experience of others that inflation and unemployment are both threats and that flirtation with the first does not avoid the second .

In January this country had 4,724,000 unemployed which is a startling number. The likelihood is that when the causes of the current run of unemployment are studied, it will be found that one very serious cause is that the United States has outpriced itself in world markets and is beginning to outprice itself in the domestic market. It is true that some bankers and merchants believe that "a little inflation is a

But truth to tell there is never a little inflation as there is no little cancer. Those are just mitigating terms to make whatever trouble one has a little more palatable. But all experience with inflation shows that if it is permitted to take hold, it is very difficult to control. From a long range standpoint, it hurts every-

Balderston put it aptly when he said: Creeping inflation has another vital defect. It will not remain gradual any more than a lion cub will continue small and harmless. Once the people of a country accept the prospect of continued inflation and begin to make their business decisions in heart, which is primarily of mus- defects. The same can be said of the light of that prospect, the infant cub starts to grow. It becomes an animal, not only big, but uncontrollable - a vicious lion uncaged .

In the end the wage-price spiral destroys the value of money and reduces the productivity of the nation. At the present moment, the State of New York is broke; the city of New York is broke; the State of Michigan is broke. This is only the beginning. As the dollar loses in value, no matter how much is collected in taxes, it will be insufficient to pay for the goods and services which state and municipal governments have to pay.

When policemen are underpaid, the entire community is endangered; when school teachers are underpaid, the children suffer. The depression of the 1930's produced an inadequately educated generation. Our people need to give thought to what is actually happening. We have not been defeated by Soviet Russia in war; our cities have not been bombed out of existence but the streets are filthy because it is becoming too expensive to keep them clean. Our children have not been brain-washed by a conqueror but teachers do not enjoy holding two jobs to earn a living and when they have to do that, they approach the little brats without the patience and loving-kindness that are essential in making decent men and women by learning and training.

Money, which can be the cause of all evil, is also essential for the production of the good.

John Foster Dulles' Physical Heroism Has Not Been Fully Appreciated

of John Foster Dulles' heroism has not yet been told. Probably it can't be told in full for some

This writer, when in Mexico for the inauguration of President Lopez Mateos, reported that the Secretary of State was suffering great pain, had two doctors standing by one night, but went through the ordeal of shaking hands with several thousand Americans at an embassy reception, plus the formalities of the Mexican inauguration, without letting anyone know how ill he was.

He even refused to call off his trip to San Francisco to speak before the Chamber of Commerce, remarking to a friend that, if he was suffering from cancer, one or two days would make no difference in reaching a hospital.

Back in Washington, Dulles rested a few days, then flew to Paris for the meeting of NATO. The European statesmen who sat opposite him had no idea they were talking to a sick but courageous man. President Eisenhower argued with him, threatened to order him out of the State Department. Finally he decided Dulles would never be happy if he were not at work. Mrs Dulles agreed. Most women want their husbands to retire after a certain age, but Mrs. Dulles, knowing her husband, knows that he lives only to pilot our pressing foreign affairs toward the goal of peace.
